The picturesque Deep Creek Lake, midway between Ottawa and Gatineau, has been blighted for decades by a former copper smelter at the heart of a battle between the town's environmentalists and mining company

Resolute Forest Products. But an agreement between the two parties that will end the nearly 15-year-old saga, struck late last week, has provoked anger among some environmentalists. The agreement between the two parties keeps the smelter in business and the company's plans to build a new one in the 3da54e8ca3
